MESSAGE

I am happy to learn that the Indian Defence Service of Engineers is celebrating its Raising Day on 17 September 2007.

The IDSE has a remarkable pool of highly trained manpower, which handles large and complex civil projects throughout the country for a wide variety of clients. Project management is all about delivery of quality products within given time and cost constraints. Effective project management is an important national need. I believe the IDSE has the capability and experience to make major contributions to the process of nation building by putting to good use its wealth of technological resources in the fields of project planning and management.

I extend my best wishes to all the officers of the Indian Defence Service of Engineers and their family members on this occasion and wish them all success in their endeavours.
